

MOMMY, WHY COME? Being Bullied:

Maybe I'll Tell and Maybe I Won't

There is a serious problem going on in our schools today, and it's getting worse every day. The problem is bullying, and it crosses all socio-economic, racial, and gender classes. It doesn't matter if the targeted child is rich or poor, if they come from a black, white, or brown family, or if the child is male or female. It doesn't discriminate.

Many students have no clue of how to deal with it. So, what some of them do is hurt themselves, even to the point of committing suicide. Although I am not a professional therapist, it is my goal through this book to minister to anyone who is experiencing this and remind you that God knows all about it, and He is able.
